Section of Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice

2005 Annual Meeting
August 5-7, 2005
The Fairmont Hotel
Chicago, Illinois

Welcome to the 2005 Annual Meeting

On behalf of the Ad Law Section, I cordially invite you to join us in Chicago for the 2005 Annual Meeting. As you peruse the information in this brochure, I think you will agree that we've arranged some very topical and exciting programs ourselves. And we have partnered with other Sections and Divisions of the ABA to offer others.

In addition to the CLE programs and our Council meetings, I especially would like to invite you to attend our Section Reception and Dinner on Friday evening. We will be at the swank University Club of Chicago, and we are fortunate to have as our special guest Richard Epstein, the distinguished University of Chicago Law School professor and widely-acclaimed author. I'm certain Professor Epstein will enlighten and entertain us with his after dinner remarks.

I encourage you to make plans now to attend this meeting. The Section will be based at the Fairmont Hotel. And consider this my personal invitation for you to join fellow administrative and regulatory law colleagues each evening in the Chair's hospitality suite after dinner.

I look forward to seeing you in Chicago.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Randolph J. May". The signature is written in a cursive, slightly slanted style.

2:00 pm – 3:30 pm

Criminal Penalties for Regulatory Crimes

[Hyatt Regency/Presidential CLE Center]

This program will explore why the criminal law intent elements for crimes that entail a violation of regulatory regimes tend to be very low. How are decisions related to formal charges made, especially when the intent standards are on the lower end of the spectrum? Is there any validity to the fear of some small businesses that the government targets smaller entities with little resources to defend in order to beef up enforcement statistics? Case studies will include the Department of Justice Public Integrity Section, which investigates and prosecutes campaign finance violations under a knowing and willful standard, as well as other high-profile cases where the Government has an interest in bringing for deterrence purposes.

Co-Sponsor: Criminal Justice Section

Panelists:

John Baker, Professor, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, LA

David Frulla, Collier Shannon, Washington, DC

Noel Hillman, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC

When Local Government Makes Land Use and Environmental Decisions: Due Process or Political Smackdown?

[Fairmont Chicago]

When local governments decide issues relating to land use planning or environmental regulation, the decision making process is intensely political. Elected officials such as city councils are often responsible for the ultimate decision, yet such decision makers have little time or expertise. The various players make political contributions to decision makers, organize media campaigns, and pack the hearing room with supporters. Yet due process norms often apply as well, guaranteeing notice to stakeholders, a fair hearing, and impartial decision makers. Local government finds it difficult to reconcile due process and politics in this volatile atmosphere. This program explores the issues of law, politics, and ethics that arise when local government must make land use and environmental decisions.

Co-sponsors: Administrative Law Section, State and Local Government Law, National Conference of the Administrative Judiciary, Standing Committee on Environmental Law and Government and Public Sector Lawyers Division

2:00 pm – 3:30 pm

Dancing in the Dark: Civil and Administrative Proceedings as Tools in Criminal Investigation

[Presidential CLE Center/Hyatt Regency Chicago]

Civil and administrative proceedings are attractive tools for prosecutors because they offer even fewer procedural protections to the subjects and targets of the investigation and allow the government to withhold or obscure important information concerning the potential criminal investigation, while providers and their counsel may be more open in their response to civil and administrative investigations. While parallel civil and criminal proceedings have long been a recognized part of the investigative landscape, increasingly providers and their counsel are finding that civil litigation, such as False Claims Act suits, and administrative proceedings, such as suspension proceedings, are laying the foundation for subsequent criminal investigations and prosecutions, both of providers and individual personnel. This panel will explore the issues and risks facing providers and their counsel when confronted by civil and/or administrative proceedings that may (or may not!) be part of an underlying criminal investigation.

Specific topics to be addressed: The interrelationship between civil and administrative proceedings and criminal investigations; assessing whether there is a criminal investigation behind a civil and/or administrative proceeding; representing a company in a civil/administrative proceeding while protecting its interests in the criminal proceeding; and cooperation and waiver issues.

Continuing the Dialogue: Congress and the Judiciary

[Presidential CLE Center/Hyatt Regency Chicago]

This program is a follow up on the successful Midyear Meeting program entitled "Time for a Dialogue Between Congress and the Judiciary" that featured Senator Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), Honorable Deanell Tacha, Chief Judge United States Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit, Chair Judicial Conference Committee on the Judicial Branch, President, American Inns of Court, Honorable Ricardo H. Hinojosa, United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas, Chair, United States Sentencing Commission, Honorable Berle Schiller, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and Chair of the NCFTJ Congressional Relations Committee, and Dean Rodney Smolla, University of Richmond Law School. This program will continue to explore ways to enhance collegiality between Congress and the Judiciary, and the possibility of re-instituting the Williamsburg conferences. The program will feature a high-ranking member of the Judiciary and the Congress.

How Federal Bank Regulators Look at Outsourcing Arrangements

[Presidential CLE Center/Hyatt Regency Chicago]

As financial institutions look to third parties to perform routine tasks and offer products and services, the federal regulators are looking at the arrangements with these third parties. Questions about the contractual terms, the required due diligence, and security of data and documents are all being asked. Examinations in this area have become very stringent. This session looks at all aspects of the regulatory review of outsourcing by financial institutions. Panelists include representatives from the Office of Thrift Supervision, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and private practice.

Panelists:

Bob Engebret, Office of Thrift Supervision, Washington, DC

Guest Workers, Permanent Residents or Mass Deportations: Whither Immigration Reform in the 109th Congress?

The goal of this session will be to highlight and debate the underlying principles and merits of diverse legislative proposals in the 109th Congress to reform the federal immigration system considering the interests of individual equity, the national economy and national security. According to reliable census estimates, over 10 million people live and work in the United States without valid immigration status. At the same time, many employers report difficulties in filling jobs with U.S. citizens and others legally entitled to reside in the U.S. As a proactive response, President George W. Bush has announced his intentions in his second term to legislate a guest worker program. Some legislators instead advocate for, on the one hand, legalized status for undocumented workers in the U.S., or, on the other, heightened enforcement of current immigration laws. Speakers will reflect upon the different principles and approaches to immigration reform in the 109th Congress and the ABA's history and current policy advocacy in this arena.
