Dear Colleagues:

It is with great pleasure that I announce the 2005 Administrative Law Conference of the ABA Section of Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice. In addition to our annual Developments in Administrative Law review, which should bring you up to date with the major developments in administrative and regulatory law, we have a wide array of fantastic programs with leading experts on the important administrative and regulatory law issues of the day. We are pleased to present a timely panel on challenges to the administrative process for government in responding to natural disasters. We are highlighting this program as a plenary to spark a critical discussion on the role of the administrative process in improving federal, state, and local response to catastrophic challenges to life and property. In addition, we are proud to feature our first E.U.

Symposium, showcasing some preliminary findings from our important Project on Administrative Law of the European Union. As a gracious end to the conference, we will close with a reception and dinner at the Cosmos Club, where the Ambassador from the EU will join us and make remarks. Please join us for what promises to be a most interesting and fun conference.

Thursday, November 17

9:00am – 10:30am

Homeland Security and the International Transportation of Goods (1.5 hrs CLE)

U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP), now part of the Department of Homeland Security, has been tasked with developing programs to secure the supply chain of goods entering the country and to prevent the entry of weapons of mass destruction and biological weapons. While maintaining its traditional duties dealing with commercial issues, the CBP has faced these new challenges with various programs such as the Customs Trade Partnership Against Terrorism (C-TPAT), the Container Security Initiative (CSI) and other programs. Recently these programs have undergone changes and both congressional committees and the General Accounting Office have reviewed them. This program will discuss the past, present and future directions of the CBP to secure the border and the U.S. supply chain. What are the advantages and responsibilities of private companies that participate in these programs? In house counsel involved in trade or transportation, as well as general practitioners involved in advising clients in various related industries should attend this program.

Regulating Identity Theft and Data Breaches (1.5 hrs CLE)

Co-sponsored by the Antitrust Law Section Committee on Privacy and Security

Identity theft has become a major concern for regulatory agencies and numerous industry sectors. Recent surveys have indicated that between 9 and 10 million Americans became victims of identity theft in a one-year period. Moreover, a growing number of businesses and financial institutions have become concerned about the potential risks and liabilities associated with data compromises, which may involve anything from harmless data exposures to account fraud to full-blown identity theft. This panel will identify current trends in identity theft and data breach problems, discuss current enforcement and prevention initiatives in the public and private sectors, and explore the potential impact of federal and state legislative proposals to regulate identity theft and data exposures and compromises.

Moderator:

- John D. Arterberry, Executive Deputy Chief, Fraud Section, Criminal Division, U.S. Dept. of Justice, Washington, DC

Panelists:

Judicial Review of Agency Letters—Has Automatic Laundry Been Hung Out to Dry? (1.5 hrs CLE)

Some thirty years ago, National Automatic Laundry and Cleaning Council v. Shultz, 443 F.2d 689 (D.C. Cir. 1971), found a letter from the agency head to be reviewable agency action. Such review of informal agency statements has long been a contentious issue. Three recent decisions raise questions about the vitality of National Automatic Laundry, suggesting increased judicial resistance to review of informal issuances.

Moderator:

- William S. Jordan, III, Professor, University of Akron School of Law

Panelists:

Ensuring Confidentiality in Government ADR (1.5 hrs CLE)***

After events in the late 1990's indicated widespread confusion and controversy over confidentiality in Federal Agency ADR, three ABA sections created a Government ADR Confidentiality Committee. This Confidentiality Committee — comprised of public and private sector ADR program managers, mediators, and lawyers, personnel from offices of inspectors general, Department of Justice lawyers, and others — has recently completed its Confidentiality Guide. The Guide offers practical advice on how best to assure appropriate levels of protection for information submitted in confidence in federal agencies' ADR proceedings. Its analysis seeks to assist program administrators, neutrals, and others in dealing with day-to-day issues like case intake, convening, confidentiality agreements, document handling, access requests, evaluation, and training, and to promote a consensus that will reduce future confidentiality breaches. The experienced mediators, program administrators, and other experts on this panel will discuss the Guide and its recommendations, related intra-governmental activities, and offer practical insights on protecting sensitive data in a variety of government ADR settings.

Moderator:

- Philip Harter, Professor, University of Missouri

Panelists:

- David Batson, Environmental Protection Agency
- Robert Fisher, RESOLVE Inc.
- Sandy Keith, Office of Inspector General, Corporation for Public Broadcasting

*This program will be held at the ABA Office, 740 15th Street, NW.

10:45am – 12:15pm

The Federal Bank Regulator's Approach to Data Security (1.5 hrs CLE)

Since the beginning of the year there have been a number of data breaches involving the confidential information of consumers. Legislation has been introduced in Congress and in many state Houses. Insured depository institutions have been required to have policies and procedures in place for several years to mitigate the danger of breaches of customer information. This session looks at the banking agencies' guidance, what is required for institutions, how examiners are looking at what banks are doing. Also, the session addresses the interaction with the bills in Congress and the states and the impact that passage would affect the regulatory process.

Moderator:

- Charlotte M. Bahin, Sr. VP for Regulatory Affairs, America's Community Bankers

Panelists:

- Mark Fajfar, Counsel, Fried Frank Shriver Harris & Jacobson
- Jeff Gillespie, Assistant Chief Counsel, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency
- Robert Gordon, Counsel, House Financial Services Committee

10:45am – 12:15pm

The Structure of Statutory Interpretation Within the Executive Branch (1.5 hrs CLE)

Statutory interpretation is a pervasive task for executive branch actors. It arises in the wide variety of circumstances that involve enforcement or implementation of the law. Moreover, for the vast number of actions that executive officials take that never give rise to a justiciable dispute, executive branch officials are the primary (and final) expositors of statutory meaning. This panel examines the principles of statutory interpretation that apply to executive branch actors. To what extent should principles of statutory interpretation developed by courts also apply to executive actors? How is authority of interpretive methods itself allocated within the executive branch, whether among the White House, the Attorney General, and the agencies, or within agencies themselves? And ultimately, do our current structures of judicial review adequately account for the interpretive practices of executive branch actors?

Moderator:

- Bernard W. Bell, Associate Dean and Professor, Rutgers Law School-Newark

Panelists:

- Trevor W. Morrison, Assistant Professor, Cornell Law School
- Randolph D. Moss, Partner, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr LLP
- Kevin M. Stack, Assistant Professor, Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law

10:45am – 12:15pm

Bringing Rulemaking Into the Twenty-First Century (1.5 hrs CLE)

Scholars, practitioners and stakeholders of all persuasions have complained for decades that rulemaking takes far too long to complete, yet still leaves many people dissatisfied with both the process and the outcome. This panel brings together leading scholars and agency officials briefly to consider the achievements and pitfalls of traditional rulemaking, survey the track record of various reform experiments (such as negotiated rulemaking, e-rulemaking, and iterative comment) and, most of all, to consider specific proposals for reform.

Panelists:

- Don Arbuckle, Deputy Administrator, Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, OMB
- Neil Eisner, Asst General Counsel for Regulation and Enforcement, Department of Transportation
- Philip Harter, Professor, University of Missouri School of Law
- Richard Parker, Professor, University of Connecticut School of Law
- Stuart Shulman, Sr. Research Associate, University of Pittsburgh

10:45am – 12:15pm

The Evolving Professionalism of Federal ADR Programs (1.5 hrs CLE)***

The use of neutral professionals to assist the operations of federal agencies & resolve federal administrative disputes has become increasingly commonplace over the past 5 years. As the demand for ADR increases, there has been a marked evolution in the practices of agency programs that support the use of ADR. ADR programs are incorporating innovation management tools and techniques that have substantially shifted how the use of neutrals is considered, utilized and justified as a standard part of agency efforts. This panel of professional managers responsible for ADR programs in a variety of federal administrative agencies will explore the evolving nature of federal ADR and its impact on the practice of federal agencies.

Panelists:

- Jeff Lape, Dispute Resolution Specialist, Environmental Protection Agency
- Rick Miles, Dispute Resolution Specialist, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission
- Elena Gonzales, Dispute Resolution Specialist, Department of Interior

The New Medicare Beneficiary Appeals System: Rubber Stamp or Real Reform? (1.75 hrs CLE)

Co-sponsored by the National Conference of Administrative Law Judges, the Health Law Section, and the TTIPS Section

As part of the Medicare claims appeals system overhaul, the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid have contracted with Qualified Independent Contractors (QICs) to reconsider denied claims, replacing the Part B Fair Hearing. Is QIC reconsideration merely a rubber stamp creating another barrier or is it real reform in efficiently resolving appeals?

Panelists:

- Vicki Gottlich, Senior Policy Attorney Beneficiary Advocate, Center for Medicare Advocacy
- Robert P. Charrow, Shareholder, Greenberg Traurig, LLP
- David Cade, Deputy General Counsel, Dept. of Health and Human Services

2:15pm – 4:00pm

Rulemaking – An Insider’s Guide to Writing Effective Comments (1.75 hrs CLE)

Trial advocacy and appellate advocacy get lots of attention; “administrative rulemaking advocacy” almost none. But preparing effective comments on proposed rules is an essential skill for the administrative lawyer. Three experienced current and former agency lawyers will discuss how to make the most of this chance to inform and influence agency decisionmaking, discussing which sorts of information, arguments, style, and approach work best.

Moderator:

- Richard G. Stoll, Partner, Foley & Lardner LLP

Panelists:

- Jonathan E. Nuechterlein, Partner, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr LLP
- Caroline Wehling, Attorney, Office of General Counsel, EPA
- Ann H. Wion, Deputy Chief Counsel for Program Review, Office of General Counsel, Food and Drug Administration

2:15pm – 4:00pm

Privatization of Government Functions—From Iraq to Katrina (1.75 hrs CLE)

The increase in privatization of functions previously performed by government officials has created problems both of oversight and of appropriateness of the functions privatized. This has been seen with the contracting out of military functions in Iraq, but it occurs throughout government.

This panel will discuss the privatization or outsourcing movement as it relates to federal functions that are arguably “inherently governmental” and what that term means in light of OMB’s Circular A-76 process, the Subdelegation Act and relevant constitutional requirements.

Moderator:

- Paul Verkuil, Professor, Cardozo Law School

Panelists:

- Matthew Blum, Senior Attorney, Office of Federal Procurement Policy, OMB
- Daniel Gordon, Managing Associate General Counsel, GAO
- Sallyanne Payton, Professor, Michigan Law School
- Steve Schooner, Professor, George Washington University Law School

2:30pm – 4:00pm

Judicial Security and Continuity in the Post 9/11 Environment (1.5 hrs CLE)

A panel of judges will discuss the realities of judicial security in the Post 9/11 environment, including threat assessment, security precautions and strategies. The panel will also discuss recent experiences related to Hurricane Katrina and how the Courts should be prepared to provide continuity of judicial services in the face of natural disaster.

Moderator:

- The Honorable Ruth L. Kleinfeld

Panelists:

- The Honorable Mark A. Brown
- The Honorable Tyrone Butler
- Paul Durette, Federal Protective Service
- The Honorable Chris Graham
- The Honorable John Vittone
- Wendell C. Shingler, Federal Protective Service

2:30pm – 4:00pm

Enforcement, Ethics, and Ombuds: A Practical Approach to a Theoretical Dilemma (1.5 hrs CLE) ***

A company may establish an Ombuds Office to address particular issues such as employment discrimination or securities and accounting matters. The office is designed to provide a mechanism by which employees can raise an issue so that it can be resolved within the firm itself. There is a potential tension between this approach and an enforcement agency which often prefers that alleged violations be handled in a way that will not remain confidential within the company, perhaps by referral directly to the agency itself. A similar tension might arise when an enforcement agency establishes an Ombuds Office to work out issues informally. This program will explore the role and function of Ombuds Offices as they relate to enforcement agencies such as the SEC, EEOC, and IRS.

Moderator:

- Philip Harter, Professor, University of Missouri Law School

Panelists:

- Nina Olson, National Taxpayer Advocate, Internal Revenue Service
- Joan McKown, Chief Counsel – Enforcement Division, SEC
- Theresa Prator, Ombuds, Los Angeles World Airport (LAX) – invited

**This program will be held at the ABA Office, 740 15th Street, NW*

5:30pm – 7:30pm

Reception at the historic Dolley Madison House, 1520 H Street, NW

Dolley was born in Greensboro (at that time the Quaker community of New Garden), North Carolina. Widowed early, she eventually found herself living in Philadelphia with her young son. It was there that wealthy Virginia planter and statesman James Madison sought her out, and after four months, wed her. Dolley then shed her drab clothes, her naturally merry personality bubbling to the surface.

Serving as Washington, D. C., hostess for widower-President Thomas Jefferson at the turn of the 19th century, and then as mistress of the White House when James Madison was president, Dolley added fun and sparkle to the social scene in the young republic. She had been cautioned by her husband to monitor her consumption of champagne because, “If you drink much of it, it will make you hop like the cork.”

It was natural then that her own residence on Lafayette Square would become the focus of a social and political life that closely paralleled that of the White House. After the president’s annual New Year’s Day reception, it was customary for callers to troop across the Avenue from the White House to pay their respects to the widow Madison.

In 1887 the Cosmos Club moved into Dolley Madison’s house, and was in good company—among the best addresses, one could say. From 1800 on, the presidents lived in the White House. The park to the north was soon lined with residences housing distinguished American and foreign dignitaries—Stephen Decatur, Henry Adams, James Blaine, Henry Clay and Daniel Webster, among others, and, of course, Dolley Madison (1768-1849).

Friday, November 18

7:30am – 8:30am

Section Committee Roundtable Breakfasts

8:30am – 10:00am

Bonus Session: Hurricane Katrina and the Administrative Process (1.5 hrs CLE)

In the wake of the destruction and devastation that Hurricane Katrina visited on New Orleans, the country is considering the extent to which failures in the environmental, natural resource, disaster-planning and emergency response functions of government contributed to the catastrophe. While there is disagreement about the degree of government failure, it does seem clear that at least some of the damage visited upon New Orleans by Hurricane Katrina could have been prevented by wiser public policy choices. Panelists with different perspectives will consider whether there were flaws in the administrative process, such as the lack of public participation, the division of authority between federal and state officials, or the process of assessing risks, that led to failures in government policy. The panel will also consider what improvements should be made. Should, for example, Congress establish an independent disaster-review board to assess vulnerable locations and set priorities for spending on disaster prevention?

Panelists to be announced.

Participation in Rulemaking in the Information Age: Lessons from Europe for the United States

The globalization of economic activity is motivating the creation of government institutions that transcend national boundaries – and for that reason also outstrip national political traditions. These institutions must find approaches to regulation that can both satisfy divergent politics and elude the frustrating grip of those whose activities require public control. European Union's procedures for generating regulatory norms suggest possible lessons for policymakers in both Europe and the United States. This program will discuss EU rulemaking, contrast it with the US, and draw out the lessons from both experiences.
