

Gene Burrus is a Senior Attorney in the Antitrust Practice Group at Microsoft. Gene is responsible for providing antitrust advice and counseling to numerous product groups at Microsoft and for managing relationships with and investigations by antitrust enforcement authorities in the US and around the world. Prior to joining Microsoft in 2002, Gene was an antitrust attorney at American Airlines in Fort Worth, Texas, where he handled both counseling and litigation. Before joining American Airlines in 1997, Gene was in private practice in Los Angeles, California with the McClintock, Weston Firm, handling a variety of commercial litigation matters. Before he was a lawyer, he was a structural analysis engineer for General Dynamics. He received his Juris Doctor degree in 1991 from the University of Virginia, and a Bachelor of Science in Aerospace Engineering from the University of Oklahoma in 1986. Gene is married and in his spare time enjoys golf, traveling and watching his beloved Sooners play football.
