ABA Forum on the Construction Industry
2007 Fall Meeting

Another Perfect Storm

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
BIOLOGICAL SURVEY

newport rhode island

October 25-26, 2007

Hyatt Regency Newport Hotel & Spa, Newport, RI

Dear Colleagues

At the Forum's 2007 Fall Meeting, we will set sail in beautiful Rhode Island and navigate the stormy waters encountered in managing the risks of a construction project. Regardless of which member of the crew you represent--the owner, design professional, the contractors or subcontractors--this Program will provide you advanced guidance to maneuver the Project Ship through the storm from the time the course for the Project is initially charted until you dock at Project completion.

On the opening day of our Program, we will begin our journey with exploring how to navigate your way through the electronically managed project. Our sophisticated panel of presenters will discuss the legal challenges presented with the use of electronic design tools and workrooms, dedicated project websites, and building information modeling (BIM) during the construction process. Day 1 of our chartered course will also include lively and interactive panel discussions which will address managing the risk and liability for construction administration by design professionals and agency construction managers, the practical use and implications of incentive and disincentive clauses during construction, addressing the cumulative effects of requests for information, change order requests and change directives, and how you, as counsel, can successfully assist the project participants while dealing with common and, not so common, events that threaten the course of the project—both in terms of the schedule and the costs.

On Day 2 of our journey, our morning begins with a sail through the treacherous waters of claims brought under the Civil and Criminal False Claims Acts. We will also explore the disruptive effect of contract defaults during the course of construction, and surety's role in completing a troubled project. And our travels together conclude as we direct our ship into international waters, where our experienced presenters will address the ethical considerations in multi-jurisdictional international practice.

This Program is well suited for the experienced counselor who may have sailed the troubled waters already as there are always new challenges in helping clients adjust for those unique risks of the construction process. Our time together will help our clients chart an effective course and navigate the stormy waters of construction. We look forward to setting sail with you in beautiful Newport, Rhode Island.

8:45 – 10:00 AM

PLENARY 1:

SUCCESSFULLY NAVIGATING YOUR WAY THROUGH THE ELECTRONICALLY-MANAGED PROJECT:

Legal Challenges Presented By The Increased Use of Electronic Design Tools, Building Modeling Systems and Electronic Workrooms

Howard Ashcraft

Hanson, Bridgett, Marcus, Vlahos & Rudy, LLP
San Francisco, CA

Bruce R. Gerhardt

HDR, Inc., Omaha, NE

Timothy M. O'Brien

Faegre & Benson LLP, Minneapolis, MN

Our Panel will review the use of collaborative electronic design tools and electronic workrooms (including CADD, project-dedicated websites, and building information modeling (BIM) systems) during the construction process, various legal concerns presented by their use, and methods or strategies for dealing with those concerns. The Panel also will address how "electronically stored information" generated through these collaborative processes is affected by the recent amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

10:00 – 11:00 AM

PLENARY 2:

WHO'S STEERING THE SHIP?: Construction Administration by Design Professionals and Agency Construction Managers

Frank Riggs – Moderator

Troutman Sanders, LLP, Atlanta, GA

Stanley J. Dobrowski

Calfee, Halter & Griswold, LLP, Columbus, OH

Karl F. Oles

Stoel Rives, LLP, Seattle, WA

One key decision in managing the risk of a construction project is choosing someone to represent the owner's interests during construction. Our speakers will discuss the options of using a design professional and/or an "agency" construction manager to provide construction administration, and the liability issues associated with construction administration. Attendees will learn the similarities and differences between these options and receive a checklist of issues to consider on your next project. You will also learn how design professionals and agency CM's can contribute to – and help resolve – problems when a "perfect storm" strikes on a project.

11:00 – 11:15 AM

BREAK

11:15 AM – 12:15 PM

PLENARY 3:

HIGH AND LOW TIDES: Practical Use and Impact of Incentive and Disincentive Clauses

William J. Ferguson – Moderator

McCarter & English, LLP, Boston, MA

John W. O'Neil, Jr.

Western Group, Inc., St. Louis, MO

Nancy Taylor

Bechtel Corporation, Frederick, MD

The foundation for incentive and disincentive clauses is to establish defined economic consequences to a range of performance outcomes. Our speakers will address various incentive/disincentive clauses, their objectives and enforcement and how they encourage and discourage behavior during the course of the project.

12:15 – 1:30 PM

LUNCH

WAR GAMING AND HOMELAND

SECURITY: Using Gaming to Discover What You Didn't Know You Didn't Know

Professor Robert C. "Barney" Rubel

Naval War College, Newport, RI*

1:45 – 2:45 PM

PLENARY 4:

HURRICANE WARNINGS: Dealing with the Cumulative Effects of RFIs, Change Order Requests and Change Directives

Buckner Hinkle, Jr.

Stites & Harbison, Lexington, KY

Michael I. Less

Less, Getz & Lipman, Memphis, TN

How effectively the project management team addresses RFI's and change order requests can be the difference between a successful project and a project with substantial unresolved claims and cost overruns. Our speakers will discuss the potentially devastating effect of numerous RFI's and change orders and the use of contract provisions and effective management to control the cumulative impact to the project.

2:45 – 3:45 PM

PLENARY 5:

SQUALLS, STORMS AND GETTING BACK

ON COURSE: Counsel's Role When Dealing With Mid-Course Adjustments In Project Planning And Scheduling And Resultant Claims

Michael F. D'Onofrio

Capital Project Management, Inc., Blue Bell, PA

John S. Vento

Trenam Kemker, Tampa, FL

The Speakers will discuss the risks and liabilities associated with failing to use the project schedule as an effective management tool and current trends and techniques related to the use of project schedules when proving or addressing claims in the aftermath of mid-course adjustments. The Speakers also will address various common occurrences, such as force majeure events, acceleration of the work, non-compliance with contractual obligations relating to the project schedule, an owner's refusal to accept a contractor's schedule, use of multiple project schedules, etc., and how counsel can assist project participants when dealing with these situations.

3:45 – 4:00 PM

BREAK

4:00 – 5:00 PMPLENARY 6:TAKING ON TOO MUCH WATER: Making Sure Control and Management of Costs Provide the Survival Kit of Sound Evidence When NeededJohn E. BulmanLittle Medeiros Kinder Bulman & Whitney, Providence, RIPat McGeehinRubino & McGeehin, Bethesda, MD

The ability to control and manage project costs when the unexpected occurs often means the difference between a successful project and years of protracted litigation. Integration of cost control and evidentiary demands often can challenge the course of conduct on a project. This session will focus on the selection and implementation of cost control systems and other tools that allow project participants to monitor and measure project costs and productivity impacts during the course of construction and how counsel can assist in directing and overseeing this process. Our speakers will also provide an overview of generally accepted practices and current industry trends concerning the documentation and measurement of project costs and productivity losses.

8:10 – 8:15 AMOPENING REMARKS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS*8:15 – 9:15 AM*PLENARY 7:TREACHEROUS WATERS: Handling Claims Brought Pursuant To The Civil And Criminal False Claims Acts And "Whistleblowers" Who Initiate These ClaimsKristine L. CatoMcAngus Goudelock & Courie, LLC, Columbia, SCKrista PagesDykema Gossett PLLC, Washington, DC

Our Speakers will discuss the risks associated with making false claims and certifications, how best to deal with the Government's use of the Civil and Criminal False Claims Acts, the False Statements Act and the Forfeiture Statute, and how to protect and insulate your client from these claims in the future. Further, the Speakers will address certain employment law issues that may arise in connection with these types of claims, including those related to the client's treatment of "whistleblowers."

9:15 – 10:30 AMPLENARY 8:SHIPWRECKED: Dealing With Construction Contract Defaults in the Real WorldGeorge J. BachrachWhiteford Taylor & Preston LP, Baltimore, MDDeborah S. ButeraAdorno & Yoss, LLC, Atlanta, GA

When construction contract defaults occur, they affect all of the parties to the construction process – owners and their agents, general contractors and subcontractors and their sureties, suppliers, and many others. How the parties deal with the default will determine whether the project can be completed successfully, and whether litigation, or at least major and expensive litigation, can be avoided. Our speakers will discuss the parties' various options before termination and after termination for managing performance-based defaults and how counsel can help the parties navigate their way through this process. Our speakers will also specifically address the surety's role in a troubled construction project, including its relationships with the other parties and its rights and obligations under the bonds.

10:30 – 10:45 AMBREAK*10:45 – 11:45 AM*PLENARY 9:A DARK AND STORMY NIGHT: The Lawyer's Ethical Considerations When Involved In a Multi-Jurisdictional, International PracticeMichael Black QCTwo Temple Gardens, London, United KingdomTroy L. HarrisKing & Spalding, LLP, Atlanta, GA

Our Speakers will address the ethical concerns that counsel must be cognizant of when engaged in a multi-jurisdictional, international practice, whether negotiating contract documents, advising clients during the course of the project, communicating with adverse parties and their counsel, or appearing on behalf of a client in an international arbitration proceeding.
