

Greetings!

The ABA is once again sponsoring a small group of ABA Day in Washington participants to be sworn in to the Supreme Court. This event, which has become a highlight of ABA Day participation for many Bar Leaders, will take place at 8:00 a.m. on Tuesday, April 15, 2008. For your information, the ABA Day schedule is posted here: <http://www.abanet.org/poladv/abaday08/>.

Immediate Past Chair of the House of Delegates and ABA Day Chair, Stephen N. Zack, will move the admissions. Prior to the ceremony, participants (and a guest) will be treated to a breakfast with the Chief Clerk. I was sworn in myself in 2003 and it was a great opportunity. This is the only time the swearing in ceremony could take place in conjunction with the ABA Day schedule, but it is well worth traveling out a day earlier (to arrive on Monday evening) if you can make it. There are plenty of D.C. activities to fill the rest of your day before the official ABA Day programming starts on Tuesday evening at 7:00 p.m. with the new Welcome Dinner.

We still have 3 spots available, offered on a first-come, first-serve basis to ABA Day participants. The deadline to complete the paperwork and submit it to me is March 31, 2008. For your information, here again is the direct link to the Supreme Court admissions website:

If you intend to be admitted, please e-mail me back and tell me when your paperwork (including the check payable to the United States Supreme Court) will be in the mail. (I would encourage everyone to send this material via FEDX or other overnight courier.) Do not mail the paperwork to the Supreme Court -- please send it to me for our group event.

Thank you very much for your help! Please let me know if you have any questions.

Best regards, Julie
