

Tara Magner

Tara Magner is the National Immigrant Justice Center's Director of Policy. Her responsibilities include analyzing developments in immigration law and policy and advocating for positive reform in Congress and within Executive Branch agencies. Tara joined the staff after serving as a counsel to Senator Patrick Leahy of Vermont on the U.S. Senate Committee on the Judiciary. In her five years on Senator Leahy's committee staff, Tara handled immigration, refugee and human rights issues. Prior to that, she served as Deputy Director of the Winston Foundation, a private foundation that awarded grants on international human rights, refugee protection, and conflict resolution. Tara is a graduate of Georgetown University Law Center and is admitted to the bar in Maryland.
